Census Bureau to Publish Handsome Booklet Giving Names of Heads of Families in Original States Shown by Census of 1790.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Special—The Bureau of the Census has about completed the publication of the names of heads of families in Virginia at the first census taken in 1790. The bureau did not have the schedules for Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, New Jersey and Delaware, these having been destroyed when the British burned the Capitol at Washington during the war of 1812. State enumerations were made in Virginia in 1782, 1783, 1784 and 1785, but the lists on file in the State Library include the names for only thirty-nine of the seventy-eight counties into which the State was then divided.

The Census Bureau obtained these records from the State Library in Richmond, and has published them in lieu of census returns.

The first census of the United States was an enumeration of the inhabitants of the thirteen colonies, and in addition Kentucky, Maine, Vermont and Tennessee.

The complete transcript of the names of heads of families, with accompanying information, presents, for the first time, detailed facts as to the number of inhabitants—male, females, etc.—for each minor civil division for all those States for which information was not originally published.

It was in response to repeated requests from patriotic societies and persons interested in genealogy or desirous of studying the early history of the United States that Congress passed a law in 1907 authorizing the publication of the schedules of the first census, providing that no expense should be incurred by the United States through such work.

For this reason the volume for each State, consisting of from 100 to 300 pages, printed on fine paper, and well bound, is sold at $1. It may be obtained from the Director of the Census, Washington, D. C.

CURRENT COMMENT

What the Leading Journals are saying on matters of public interest.

The Limit.

We have been asked to state what we think will be the time limit set for cheering in the conventions of 1912, considering how much more time was used this year than previously. This is not a matter which can be settled either by historical methods or mathematical computations. The calculus seems to afford few opportunities for determination of such an event, but we should say that day at least would be required. In the year 1916 a week should be allowed and machines should be engaged to do the work, during which time the ostensible clackers should go home and consult their constituents and return to cast their votes.

As a fact it seems as if the long distance telephone would soon make it unnecessary to have any convention whatever. Let it all be done without expense to the individuals and with complete harmony—the sort which the leading candidate can arrange—with a club if necessary. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Indicting Corporations.

We have always regarded the modern practice of seeking to hold corporations criminally responsible as absurd. To charge with crime an abstract entity—a creature of the law that has no power, can perform no function, is invested with no authority or power of action except that specifically bestowed upon it by the law—is, to our mind, an utter absurdity.

In order that such organizations may conveniently transact the business for which they are incorporated, they are specifically authorized and empowered to contract, and, hence, to sue and be sued. They may therefore, rightly and logically be held responsible in civil damages, because without this, their stockholders would or might profit by their wrong doing in their intercourse with others. But there would be about as much sense for an ecclesiastical court trying an industrial corporation for heresy, as a criminal court trying it for crime. A criminal act, committed by an agent of a corporation in the name of that corporation, is no more the act of the corporation than the marriage of the president would be the act of the corporation. The corporation can perform no essentially personal act, and, hence, can no more commit a crime than it can write a poem, court a sweetheart, or marry a wife.

Good Filipinos.

It looks as though the time was fast approaching when some of the Filipinos will take their place in the same category with the Indians of other days in that the only good ones are dead ones. This is made apparent by the excuse of a number of our newest wards for the dastardly murder of a couple of Americans. They just had a feeling that they would like to kill something human and the Americans were handiest to satisfy this passion. Gibbets, guillotines and other equally efficacious life dispatchers are the proper instruments of education for such Filipinos as these.—Topeda Journal.

Never Despair.

The poor old patriarch Jacob was shrouded in gloom when he wailed out, "All these things are against me!" Joseph is gone; Simeon is gone; and they have carried away also Benjamin, who bore in his boyish face the photograph of the beautiful Rachel. He calls his lot a sad one. But the returning caravan is almost in sight which brings to him the full sacks from Egypt's granaries, and the joyful invitation to go and see his long-lost Joseph as premier of Pharaoh's kingdom. His dark hour is just before the day-dawn. What he regards as a sorrow has grown into the greatest mercy of his life. There may have been wet eyes up in that prayer-room in Jerusalem, where the little band met after their Master had left them. They were sowing in tears, to reap with joy before the next day's sun went down. Never despair of a good cause. Never despair of a great heaven-directed reform, even when the powers of hell are striving to strangle it. Never despair of a child. The one that fills you with the most solicitude and occasions your most fervent prayers, may yet gladden your life with joys beyond your brightest hopes. Never despair of a soul so long as you can plead with God for that soul or strive to bring it into a view of Christ.—Selected.

Saturday, 8th.—Psalms 144: 1-15.

What incident did David probably have in mind when he wrote these words?

Does the history of the nations bear out verse 15?

Sunday, 9th. Psalms 111: 1 (first part.)

In what way does this golden text represent the chief thought of the lesson?

For how many days did Goliath offer his challenge?

How many men in camp could repeat truthfully the words of the text?

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Following an Ideal.

There are some people whose friends are always interesting. You wonder as you hear them talk how it is that they have been so fortunate.

Nelson's sailors are always splendid fellows, no matter with what crew he sails. Brutus at the close of life can say: "My bears

Never mind about apparent failure when you try to do right. Better far high failures than low successes.

—Canon Knox Little.

THE TOBACCO TRADE

Good Year at Lynchburg.

LYNCHBURG, VA.—Special—Friday saw the close of another tobacco year in Lynchburg, and it is believed the annual report will show that the average price paid for the weed here during the past year was the highest in more than two decades.

The present indications are that the growing tobacco crop will be a fourth heavier than last year. The farmers are elated over the prospects at present.
